Playing the Game:
This is a full graphics adventure with every location illustrated. Your mission begins with the problem of finding the code for the bomb. There is also the minor problem of getting off the planet. You must visit different locations to find the objects you need, and to escape. Of course, you must pick up that code on the way. The rest is up to you.

The game responds to inputs such as:

GO NORTH

KILL ZARP

It also accepts the following single letter abbreviations: N, S, E, W, U, D: for North, South, East, West, Up and Down.

Remember to finish each input by pressing RETURN or ENTER. The program recognises 99 verbs and 162 nouns. If you try to do something that the program doesn’t know about it will soon tell you. The game has a SAVE facility in case you find it too much for one sitting. Just type SAVE and follow the screen prompts.

The best of luck.

It's amazing really how many folks in the Universe really don't like the Earth. Take the Zarps, for instance, just because they are having a little war of mass destruction with us they go and plant a bomb on Earth, big enough to blow the planet apart. They are now telling us they'll blow us up if we don't agree to their terms. Downright unfriendly; of course, you can stop their plans, can't you . . . . . . please??
